Of the duty and fees of the Sheriff of Middlesex, his under-sheriff, &c.

IT is the duty of the sheriff of Middlesex, by himself and deputies, to attend all his majesty's courts, judges, justices and commissioners within his county; and to execute all writs and processses by them and every of them directed to him; and also to hold his county-courts, tourns and court leets within the same.

The sheriff of Middlesex, who are also sheriffs of London, is nominated by the citizens thereof; and are, as sheriffs of London, at much greater expence in passing through their office than the sheriff of any other county in England; and therefore oblige their under-sheriff of Middlesex, out of the fees and profits arising from that office, to advance money from time to time to pay all rewards payable by the said sheriff for apprehending highwaymen and other malefactors, which are given by several acts of parliament, and to pay the wages of the justices of peace attending at the several sessions of the peace for the said county of Middlesex, and to bear part of the expence of the entertainments at the sessions of gaol-delivery held in the Old-baily, London, for the county of Middlesex, which, together with other charges incident to the said office, amounts annually at least to the sum of 450*l.* For the dispatch of the business of the county he keeps his office in Took's Court, Carey Street, Lincoln's Lincoln's Inn Fields, wherein, besides his own attendance, three clerks are daily employed (Sundays and holidays excepted); they have no salary nor wages, but the allowance hereafter mentioned out of the fees. And in consideration of his giving security to the said sheriff in the sum of 12,000*l.* to indemnify him from all damages and losses that may happen from the mistake, omission or misdemeanor of him, his deputies, clerks or bailiffs, the sheriff hath granted to him all the lawful fees, profits and perquisites belonging to the said office; and in virtue thereof he claims the several fees and sums of money hereafter mentioned, which are all the fees belonging to the said office, except what may be claimed by the county clerk.

Fees for executing a writ of Ad quod damnum cannot well be settled, but must be left to the sheriff and the party to be adjusted between them, because the inquisition on this writ is always taken on the place where the highway to be inclosed lies, or where the intended fair or market is to be held: which may occasion the sheriff's travelling a considerable journey.

Fees for executing a writ of partition cannot well be settled for the same reason; and a provision is made by Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 31. for settling the same in case the sheriffs and the parties cannot agree.
